The Flynn Hosts a Virtual Movement for Parkinson's Interactive Performance on December 19

BURLINGTON, VT — On Sunday, December 19 at 4 pm, the Flynn is excited to host a special presentation by the dancers in the Movement for Parkinson's and Wellness class. Everyone is welcome to attend this "Informance"—a combination performance and informative workshop—which includes an interactive look at some of the techniques that the students regularly use, as well as a performance of a piece they have been working on throughout the fall semester. This free hour-long event will take place over Zoom. The show will begin with a 20-minute class and the audience is invited to participate. Then, the students will show a phrase they have recently been working on together, titled _____, followed by two improvisation structures. The event closes with a Q&A with teaching artist Sara McMahon as well as the members of the Movement for Parkinson's class.
